Fabian-François Müller

(born 1977 in Thun/BE) is working on his Dissertation Project Trampas sociales: Un estudio del problema de la desconfianza en las transacciones económicas en América Latina (Social Traps: A Study of the Lack of Confidence on Economic Transactions in Argentina). Mr. Müller is tackling a sensitive topic: the lack of confidence in Argentina's sociopolitical environment. Argentineans trust their national currency as little as the various determinants of confidence: organizations, sense of security, status and distrust, corruption, democracy, growth, vulnerability and risk; these concepts illustrate the comparative approach of his planned research.

After obtaining his degree in Corporate Communications in Ticino, Mr. Müller worked as a research assistant at the University of Applied Sciences Northwestern Switzerland. While he was studying in the year 2000 he spent an exchange semester in Argentina; his current position as Wealth Manager for Southern Latin America at UBS takes him to the Cono Sur many times a year.
